where he was a member of the Chi Phi fraternity.

A short time after graduation Mr.
Marshall moved west to practice his profession and located in El Paso 32 years ago, and engaged in civil en-gineering. He was one of the principal engineers constructing the 30 mile road through the grand canyon of the Colo-rado.

In 1888 and 1889 he served as city engineer of El Paso under mayor Lightbody, and several times later, on account of his acknowledged ability as an engineer he was called in for consultation on special engineering details for the city. He built the railroad from Chispa to the San Carlos coal fields in Texas, and through Brack's canyon. The coal fields, later proved of little value and the railroad was torn up. In 1888 and 1889 he served as city en-
