

HENRY PRICE, PIONEER, DIES

Early Day Grocer Here Expires at His Home in San Gabriel, Calif.

News of the death of Henry Price, pioneer El Paso grocer, at his new home in San Gabriel, Cal., Saturday was received by his brother, Fred Price, also a pioneer of the city, at his residence on Williams street in Golden Hill. Henry Price had moved to California several years ago and it was only about two weeks ago that his family had moved into their new residence in San Gabriel.

The decedent came here about 30 years ago from San Antonio, Tex., and, with his brother, Will, entered the grocery trade in the old Mundy building, then the big structure on South El Paso street. They sold the business several years ago to H. P. Jackson, who, in turn, disposed of it to the Franklin brothers. Before settling in California Henry Price and family sold their property on Mesa avenue and at the corner of North Stanton and East Missouri for high figures.

Mr. Price is survived by his wife and three sons, Roland, in the army in France; Walter, in an aviation school in New York state; and Henry, Jr., with his mother in San Gabriel. Will Price is a banker in Salina, Kan.
