Old Timer Gone.

Candido Telles died at his home on the Gila on the morning of the 3rd, says the Lordsburg Liberal. Mr. Telles was apparently in his usual rugged health and had hitched up his team to go and vote. Before starting he concluded to go into the house for a lunch. As he got inside the door he was seized with a sharp pain in the heart, staggered, and but for the helping arm of his son Zack would have fallen. He was assisted to a chair but in a moment he was dead. Mr. Telles was born in El Paso in 1842, he and Isidora Padilla were married at Las Cruces. The union proved to be a happy one, and to them were born three sons and two daughters, all of whom, with the wife and mother, still are living.

For many years Mr. Telles was engaged in freighting, and in the early days of Clifton freighted a great deal of coke in and copper out. When the Arizona & New Mexico road was built the freighting business was killed and he concluded to go to farming. He settled on the river, took up a ranch, got out a ditch and ever since has been a prosperous farmer. He has lived a life of industry and peace and always been a good citizen. He was looked up to by the Mexicans and respected by the Americans. His death will be mourned by a wide circle of friends.
